at 0400 on Sunday 19 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunny intervals in the north, but duller further south.

Today:
Any mist slowly clearing but leaving a cloudy day in the south, with the best of any sunshine again across Cumbria and Pennine regions. Feeling slightly chillier than Saturday for most. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:
Cloud slowly lifting through Sunday night, improving visibility at the surface but shrouding the higher ground. Some clear spells may remain across Cumbria with a local frost forming. Minimum temperature -2 deg C (28 deg F).

Monday:
Less murky in the south compared to late but greyer for northern areas with increased amounts of cloud. Staying dry with temperatures around average for the time of year. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Staying settled for Tuesday and Wednesday with an increasing likelihood of some sunshine, though feeling colder with fog and frost in places overnight. Potentially turning more unsettled later on Thursday.
